North York students run bank at school

Commercial students at Westview Centennial Secondary School in North York will really know banking when they graduate.

A branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce is opening in the school next Monday.

It will be run by pupils in three Grade 11 and 12 four-year commercial classes under G. H. Eadie, who manages the bank's Jane St.-Finch Ave. branch.

The bank will be open Mondays and Fridays from 11.45 a.m. to 2 p.m. during the three school lunch periods.

Vice-principal Jack Brewer said the innovation would help commercial students learn business and encourage thrift among the other 800 students in the composite school.

He said the idea was suggested by the bank. "It's a new aspect of the schools and business community working together," he said. "And I think we are going to see more of this."

Teach-in for teen musicians

Two hundred and sixty-five teenage string players got together yesterday for an eight-hour musical teach-in.

The youngsters were from 10 junior and senior high schools in North York's west end. They got together at Westview Centennial Secondary School to play and listen together.

In the evening all 265 joined in a concert.

"It is kind of a bash for string players," explained C. Langton Bird, North York's co-ordinator of music. "The chief purpose is stirring up much more interest in music."

Musical teach-ins were started last year by Michael Crosbie, director of music at Westview. Yesterday's was the third. A fourth is planned for woodwind players in the spring.

The youngsters received instruction from and were conducted by two experts, Professor Timothy McGee of St. Xavier University in Nova Scotia, and James Coles, musical consultant to schools in the Ottawa Valley.

Bank opens school branch

The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce opened Canada's first branch bank in a high school yesterday, and got 60 new accounts in the first hour.

The branch is a joint project of the bank and Westview Centennial School, North York. It will be staffed by 100 commercial students who will rotate as tellers.

Patrick Beatty, head of the commercial department, said the bank approached the school and he thought that the work of staffing it would be a worthwhile project.

Banking is part of the commercial course.

One 16-year-old girl deposited $100, which she had saved at a summer job.

Others deposited sums from $1 to $20.

The school is surrounded by new subdivisions in the Jane-Finch area.

Bank officials say that the teen-age dollar is an important factor in today's economy.

The branch, which operates in the school's main lobby, will be open for 1½ hours each Monday and Friday.

One school official felt that at least half the student body of 875 would open accounts. If it's a success, the bank plans to open branches in other schools.

The boys and girls who act as tellers are not paid, and the bank does not pay the school for space in the lobby.

Westview Centennial School student Robert Johnson opens account at bank in the school. Tellers are fellow students Donna Thompson and Janet Mitchell.
